Concrete Washout defends rights to runoff bin

Concrete Washout Systems Inc. says it has resolved a potential patent dispute with another company that had developed a similar product, with the second company signing on as a licensed partner.

Concrete Washout of Elk Grove invented and sells portable, watertight bins that tradespeople use at job sites to wash out concrete material and wastewater, to prevent runoff into storm drains. The company applied for a patent last year.

Knoble Construction Inc. of Redlands agreed to the licensing partnership after reviewing the potential dispute, Concrete Washout said Monday in a press release, adding that it was delighted to add Knoble as a licensee. "We will be marketing the concrete washout systems box
